

FEATURES

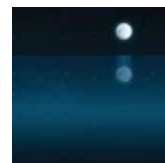

Why Your Brain Needs Exercise

By David A. Raichlen and Gene E. Alexander

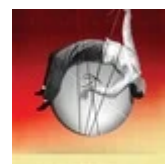

Alone in a Crowded Milky Way

By Caleb Scharf

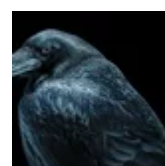

How to Break the Bonds of Opioids

By Claudia Wallis

"Birdbrain" Turns from Insult to Praise

By Onur Güntürk

Quantum Slits Open New Doors

By Urbasi Sinha

SPECIAL REPORT

INNOVATIONS IN

The DNA Drug Revolution

By Josh Fischman

The Power of Spheres

By Chad A. Mirkin, Christine Laramy and Kacper Skakuj

23 and Baby

By Tanya Lewis

Gene Therapy Arrives

By Jim Daley

Fighting Unfairness in Genetic Medicine

By Stephanie Devaney

DEPARTMENTS

FROM THE EDITOR

175th Anniversary Year Jamboree

LETTERS

Readers Respond to the September 2019 Issue

ADVANCES

Low-Income Baltimore Blocks Host Bigger, More Dangerous Mosquitoes

Nocturnal Moth Species Has a Flashy Secret

E. coli Could Produce a Popular Psychedelic for Therapeutic Use

Scientists Spot Addiction-Associated Circuit in Rats

In Case You Missed It

Strange Superconductor Sends Electrons Both Ways

Study Reveals Loss of Laos's Final Tigers

Technique Takes Sleepers from Zzz to Aha!

Cave Arachnids' Modern Range Matches Ancient Glacier Outline

Mapping the Remains of Supernovae

FORUM

We Must Stop the Executive Branch from Suppressing Science

THE SCIENCE OF HEALTH

How Gut Microbes Shape Our Response to Drugs

THE SCIENCE AGENDA

A Nationwide Ban Is Needed for "Anti-Gay Therapy"

RECOMMENDED

Everyday Mathematics, Drugs for a Broken Heart and Other New Science Books

ANTI GRAVITY

Teaching Rats to Drive: A New Model for Learning

50, 100 & 150 YEARS AGO

50, 100 & 150 Years Ago: January 2020

GRAPHIC SCIENCE

Scientific American's Colorful Covers Reveal 175 Years of Change

METER

Poetry: Maria Sibylla Merian, January 1670

OBSERVATORY

Don't Fact-Check Scientific Judgment Calls

VENTURES

Truly Secure Voting Is on the Way