APPLIED RESEARCH

Why Do Sport Coaches Adopt a Controlling Coaching Style? The Role of an Evaluative Context and Psychological Need Frustration
By: Sofie Morbée, Maarten Vansteenkiste, Nathalie Aelterman and Leen Haerens
Pages: 89–98

The Cognitive Component of Elite High Jumpers’ Preperformance Routines
By: Thomas Gretton, Lindsey Blom, Dorice Hankemeier and Lawrence Judge
Pages: 99–110

A Cognitive Behavioral Intervention for College Athletes With Injuries
By: Leslie W. Podlog, John Heil, Ryan D. Burns, Sean Bergeson, Tom Iriye, Brad Fawver and A. Mark Williams
Pages: 111–121

Assessing Psychosocial Work Environments of Coaches in Spain and Their Relationships With Mental Health, Behavioral–Stress Symptoms, and Burnout
By: Ingrid Hinojosa-Alcalde, Ana Andrés, Faye F. Didymus, Leanne Norman and Susanna Soler
Pages: 122–131

One Shot—No Hit? Evaluation of a Stress–Prevention Workshop for Adolescent Soccer Players in a Randomized Controlled Trial
By: Johanna Belz, Jens Kleinert and Moritz Anderten
Pages: 132–142

The Coach–Parent Relationship and Athlete Development in Elite Youth Hockey: Lessons Learned for Conflict Management
By: Cassidy Preston, Veronica Allan, Lauren Wolman and Jessica Fraser–Thomas

© 2020 Human Kinetics